REPORTING

WEI utilizes several strategies to optimize the corporate procurement experience. WEI in-house developers create customized and dedicated e-commerce solutions that help automate the buying cycle and that make it easier for users and business units to search for and requisition what they need.

WEI solutions use “Punchout”, Open Catalog Interface (OCI), and Electronic Data Interchange (EDI) technologies to leverage established and negotiated pricing in order to enable catalogues, self-service portals, fast shopping cart transfers, budgetary pricing searches, and project based ordering.

Additionally, WEI develops customized configure-to-order tools which allow anyone within the organization to create valid server, storage, and networking configurations. Lastly, WEI can develop role-based access solutions providing restricted content and commodity code access, only to specific groups and users.

From encryption (SSL) to shopping cart software and beyond, WEI engineers are available to help identify any B2B services that need to be integrated into a company's solution. Different classes of solutions can also be utilized if a company requires both B2C and B2B approaches.

Sizing, selecting, and configuring the best technology for a company is only part of the equation at WEI. WEI wants to not only deliver “what” their clients want, they want to deliver it “when” their clients want it and “how” they want it, too. For that reason WEI remains committed to investing in operational processes that are customized to your organization's needs. When IT acquisition and adaptation are streamlined, your team can focus on more important things—like innovation and tackling the needs of their business units.

The next step to ensure that IT acquisition and adoption are seamless and streamlined is to properly communicate all needed information in a timely fashion. For smaller accounts or individual orders, detailed reports and communications will keep your company constantly briefed on progress from the beginning of the procurement stage all the way through to final shipment. For larger accounts with more frequent orders, customized portals and dashboards are developed which allow for real-time, accurate views of inventory levels, work in progress, shipment times, and tracking information. Individualized reports, developed in collaboration with your team, will deliver the precise information needed, in exactly your preferred time frame and method.

Each client gets a dedicated WEI team that will work to discover all the operational efficiencies required to make each project a success from beginning to end. Ask to see examples of WEI's ticketing systems, dashboards, asset tracking tools, EDI automation, catalogues, and customized B2B portals.
